
Glass Vs Wooden Framed Wall Mirrors

A house with attractive mirrors is a sign of sophistication. Mirrors are more than just a reflection tool. They have also become an important part of interior decor. Mirrors can be used to not only see your physical appearance but also reveal your inner self. A wooden wall mirror embossed has a vintage feel, while a mirror with a frame is elegant. Each type has its own pros and cons. We'll give you an overview of both types and also show you the top-selling wall mirrors on WallMantra.

Wooden Wall Mirrors

A wooden wall mirror is a beloved home accessory that will last a lifetime. They are regal and have kept their charm hidden for centuries. They not only give the walls a modern touch but also add a vintage feel. Let's take a look at some of their characteristics and types.

Strong and Durable

A wooden wall-mirror has a much longer life span than glass mirrors. Wooden frames are durable and can be used for many years without needing any maintenance. They not only match every interior made of wood, but also add depth to the walls.
